THE UNION DEBATE

The question of uniting the colonies Vancouver Island and British Columbia bids fair to be the most memorable topic in the early political history of the two countries. Yesterday the subject again came before the Assembly according to notice, and in response to communications from His Excellency the Governor and the Secretary of State for the Colonies. A good deal of interest seemed to centre on the topic by the public, but the members of the Assembly were exceedingly cautious in their treatment of the matter i debate. Mr. DeCosmos, the Union cham pion, was evidently unwilling to discharge all his thunder in opening the question, and so confined himself to generalities and to ex-plaining the nature of the series of resolutions which he introduced. Mr. Franklin, the anti union spokesman, was sorry that Mr. DeCos mos had said so little, because it left him bu small scope in his argument. He wished to see Mr. De Cosmos' union castle or fortification, with all its elaborate defences, that he might demolish the works by a new system of threwing projectiles that had pretty nearly destroyed all his own political friends, and which was therefore especially calculated to annihilate his political foes. Mr. Franklin, although confined in his attack, nevertheles. went in and after showing how utterly absurd was the question of uniting the two colonies proceeded to build up a little scheme of his own by which the colonies could be brought together under a federal system of Govern ment, a little less cumbrous than tha advocated by Mr. DeCosmos. After this little tournament between the two knights there was a dreary, oppressive silence. Everybody thought something should be done, an nobody seemed either willing or able to do it. An appealing look was cast by some of the members of the committee at the Speak er, but that gentleman contented himsel with raising his eye-brows about an eighth of an inch, and giving his shoulders a hopeless shrug. Any friend of the Northern States would have felt at this particular juncture exceedingly anxious about the "Union cause." After fifteen minutes of profound do-nothingism, Dr. Trimble ros and proposed, no doubt ironically, " that the committee should rise and report progress which the committee accordingly did, and thus the first day's debate ended. The scheme-or rather schemes-of Mi DeCosmos for uniting the colonies may be thus briefly summed up. A Legislative Union with two Houses of Legislature; the Uppe to comprise an equal number of representa tives from both colonies; the Lower to commence with fifteen members for each colony but any future increase to be regulated by population. The right of taxation in each colony to rest only with the majority of eac colony's representatives. Providing this scheme is not practicable, a federal union is proposed which differs from the foregoing in this respect, that the combined Legislature becomes a federal one and deals with a questions which are of common interest t both colonies, and controls the Crown revenues. Questions of local interest, such as tax ation, &c., to be dealt with by the sam representatives, but in their local capacity Mr. Franklin's scheme is to unite th colonies by the very slight thread of a fede ration, composed of six members-three from each colony-whose duties will be confined to legislating upon such topics as postal con munication, immigration, joint loans, &c. It will be readily perceived that Mr. DeCos mos' schemes differ more in the name than it the actual working. The Legislative union which he proposes is made, by the stipulations in reference to taxation, &c., nothing more nor less than a federal one-at leas such a federal one as is propounded in the second series of his resolutions. In both his plans this gentleman very adroitly destroy all objections to union on the score of inter fering with the free port, by virtually leaving the inhabitants to manage their local affairs. Mr. Franklin's federal scheme holds out no political inducement whatever to British Columbia. It makes no provision that the present representative abortion of the neighboring colony shall give way to a more enlightened system of government; but creates the anomaly of a representation in the federal Legislature, while the local govern ment is an oligarchy of officials. There are, of course, defects in the schemes propounded by Mr. DeCosmos, as must necessarily be the case in all half measures. There exist, however, prejudices against which the legislator, if he wishes to be successful, must not attempt to run his head, and Mr. DeCosmos has framed his resolutions in such a manner as to avoid coming in contact with any particular class of politicians. We do not attempt in this article to go into the merits of the question but we wish to draw the attention of the House to a few important particulars in connection with the matter as it at present stands. It must be known to every member of the Assembly that the people of Vancouver Island have as yet expressed no opinion on the question of union. The views given in the House by the members are merely the individual opinions of those members; for the subject has never yet been made a test question at any electioneering contest. The same may be said of British Columbia. So far, we have only heard in that colony the opinions o five gentlemen, who represent the various electoral districts, and ten officials-all amiable gentlemen enough -but who represent nothing but their own personal interests. The expression given in our own Legislature as well as that given in the Council of British Columbia, may be the true expression of the public opinion of the respective colonies, and as such would bring things to a dead lock at once; but we have got no proof of the fact It is evident, therefore, that the public opinion must be consulted. It is just possible that the result of an appeal to the inhabitants of both colonies would be bitterly averse to union or vice versa. In any case it will not do for or vice versa. In any case it will not do for the House to come to any decision upon the matter without a public vote. We do not want to see the time of the country wasted in doing what may have to be undone. We would, therefore, suggest, now that the subject has come up in a definite form in the House, that the question should be submitted to the people, and that some of the most prominent members should visit British Columbia, to lay the matter clearly before the linhabit. lay the matter clearly before the inhab tants, so that they also may vote advisedly. The plan which we propose will take time, no doubt, but it will be the quickest and the only satisfactory way to decide the question.

The Speaker read a message from His Excellency the Governor in regard to the Probate Court, stating that the returns would be laid before the House at the carliest possible moment, the subject having already occupied the attention of the Excentive; also a similar message in regard to the returns of the Bankruptey Court asked for by the House; also in regard to returns as to Indian liquor selling. made the colonies provide their own defences.

Mr. Franklin said the question of defence had been debated at home, and urged that that the policy should not find an echo here. British Columbia was almost a Crown colony; Vancouver Island was different, having representation institutions, but in the sister colony it was not so, and the responsibility of the dobts of the colony rested with the Crown (oh, oh! and laughter.) The system under which the taxes were levied in British Columbia was contrary to the British constitution (oh, ob!) can only look on the colonies as united. The Crown was evidently disposed to protect the Imperial exchequer and Imperial tax-payers, and it was also our duty to protect our own revenue and our own tax-payers. But there were also colonial interests to be consulted in this union. We were people of the same race, the same language, the same laws, protected by the same Government, and there was no just reason why we should be separated. Another reason was that the colonies were intimately connected in a business point of view, and a union would remove some of the obstructions to business which now exist. Dispatch of August 7th, needs no comment. The absurdity of the information vouchsafed speaks for itself: " British Columbia is found to be habitable in some parts in the winter.
